Numb. 7219.

The Daily Courant.

Friday, December 4. 1724.

The Remainder of what passed on the 13th of November, before and at the breaking up of the Dyet of Poland.

THE Vice-Chancellour of Lithuania having resigned his Place to the King, his Majesty, by the Mouth of the Great Chancellour of that Dutchy, conferred it upon his Son, Castellan of Wilna, and gave the old Prince his Son's Office; whereupon the Father and Son changed their Seats, and the latter having taken the Oath of Fidelity, most humbly thanked his Majesty for this high Favour.

After the King had disposed of all the Offices, the Great Marshal named, by the King's Order, the Bishop of Cracow, the Palatines of Lublin and Mazow, and the Castellan of Wilna, to examine the Plan of such new Laws as were to be enacted. The Nuncios being returned into their Chamber, the Marshal of the Dyet represented to the Assembly the little Time that was left for them to deliberate on so many Affairs as lay before them, and proposed to ascertain further Time for the Dyet, that they might more conveniently deliberate upon their new Plan. A great many Deputies opposed that Overture strenuously at the first, saying that they would never consent to a farther Limitation or Prolongation of the Dyet; but after a long Debate, they all agreed to the Limitation proposed by the Marshal. Hereupon the latter named Deputies for drawing up a Plan of the new Laws, namely, the Nuncios Lzembec and Stolnick, as likewise Mr. Dunny, Regent of the Crown for the Lesser Poland, Count Ozolinsky, and M. Rusky, Castellan of Cracow, for the Greater Poland, and the Nuncios Sawicky, Notary of Wilna, and Scipion, Starost of Lida, for Lithuania. These Deputies, after having taken the Oaths of Fidelity, as usual, began to draw up in Writing the Plan in Question in three Articles; the first concerned the Security of the Kingdom; the second was a Confirmation of the Sentence relating to the Affair of Thorn; and the third the Limitation of the Dyet, as likewise the referring to the next Dyet all the other Affairs which should have been discussed in this, leaving still to his Majesty the Power of fixing the Time for a future Dyet according to the Exigency of Affairs: Upon this, a new Debate arose about the Place the ensuing Dyet should be held in; but at last the City of Grodno in Lithuania was pitched upon. It was now Midnight when this Resolution was taken, and the Nuncios being once more come into the House of Senators, being then about One in the Morning, the Plan of the new Laws was read there audibly: When the reading was over, the Marshal demanded three Times of the States of the three Orders, whether they were all consenting thereto? But the Treasurer of the Crown answer'd, That he could by no Means consent, because the third Article, which refers all undetermined Matters to another Dyet, was couched in Words too general. Several Nuncios in the Interest of the Generals back'd that Opposition vigorously, saying that it was no uncommon thing to see a High Treasurer break up a Dyet, and that he might withdraw in Safety and protest against every thing that had passed. Some of the other Nuncios desired the Marshal to take Leave of the King, in order to conclude the Dyet, and after some Dispute, he did indeed take Leave of the King, and thanked his Majesty for the unwearied Pains, he, as a common Father of the Country, had been at during the whole Dyet, for the Good of the Publick. To which the Great Chancellour made a suitable Answer. And thus the Assembly broke up at Three a-Clock in the Morning, without having done any thing.

Dantzick, Nov. 23. The Letters we received Yesterday from Thorn bring us the Melancholly News, that a Decree was come thither from Warsaw, by which the President and the Vice President of the Council of that City were condemned to be beheaded, and their Estates confiscated: 60 Burghers besides are to be punished exemplarily in their Persons: Moreover the Church of St. Mary, which belonged to the Lutherans, is to be given up to the Roman Catholicks: The Magistracy of the City is to consist hereafter of half Papists and half Protestants; all the First Rate Officers are to be likewise of the Roman Catholick Religion, if they will continue in their Places, and the College of Lutherans is to be removed a Leagne from the City; by which all the Protestant Inhabitants have been put into the greatest Consternation: However some People flatter themselves here, that the King of Prussia, and the other Protestant Powers, will make the Cause of their Brethren in Christ here their own, in order to put a Stop to the Execution of such a rigorous and horrid Decree, which the Jesuits have obtained against those poor Protestants.

Berlin, Nov. 20. Eight Days ago 30 Families of French Refugees arrived here on their Way to settle in Prussia. The King has ordered several Regiments of those that are in the Country of Magdebourg, and in the Marquisate of Brandebourg, to march forthwith towards Prussia, but we do not know upon what Design. Though General Count de Rabutin, whom the Emperour has named for his Minister at this Court, has hired an Hotel in this City, it is not yet known what Time he will come.

Stockholm, Nov. 14. Mr. Poyntz, the British Minister, has now made his Visite to all the foreign Ministers, and makes a fine Appearance. Colonel Boys, who has been for a long time Prisoner in Russia, arrived here some Days ago by the Way of Finland. Baron Hopkin, Secretary of State, is now perfectly recovered of his late Illness.

Berlin, Nov. 25. The King came hither Yesterday from Potsdam, but this Morning his Majesty returned thither again, and the Queen, as 'tis said, will follow him forthwith. We have a Report, that upon the vigorous Remonstrances which M. Swerin, our Minister at Warsaw, has made concerning the Affair of the City of Thorn, he was answered, that the Inhabitants of the said City have behaved themselves so unwarrantably in the late Tumult, that they might be dealt with as Rebels, and that the Commissioners established to make a thorough Examination of their Conduct, will proceed in this Matter without Partiality.

Paris, Nov. 27. On the 14th Instant the Academy of Inscriptions opened again their publick Assemblies; the Abbot d'Antin presided that Day, and there was read the Encomium of M. Boivin, and two Dissertations, one upon the Alcoran, and the other upon William called the Conquerour. The next Day the Academy of Sciences opened also their Assemblies, the Abbot Bignon, the King's Library-Keeper, being then President. Four Dissertations

• ſeriations were read; the firſt upon the Muſical
• Inſtruments with Strings; the ſecond upon
• the Waters of Paſſy; the third upon the Flow-
• er called the Yellow Daiſy; and the fourth upon
• diſſolving Salt in common Water, with new Ob-
• ſervations upon it.
